Before deciding to pursue a position as a Director, please ensure that you are familiar with the duties and legal responsibilities of directors under the Not-for-profit Act. As a sample of some of those responsibilities, the quotes below are taken from the Corporations Canada website,

"The law imposes a wide range of duties and liabilities on directors.... In general, these duties and liabilities reflect the position of trust that directors and officers hold in relation to the corporation and its members."

"Directors and officers are required to comply with the NFP Act and its regulations, the articles, the by-laws and any unanimous member agreement (refer to subsection 148(2) of the NFP Act). ... For example, directors are required to remain informed about the corporation's activities and to ensure the lawfulness of the articles and the purpose of the corporation."

"As part of the role they play in the corporation, directors bear a degree of financial responsibility for their decisions and actions."
